Hanging Tickets On Sale

One of our subscribers, Robert McGettigan, of 2440 Massachusetts, presented us with a disturbing editorial. It was written by the editor of the newspaper in his former hometown

The editor and publisher, William B. Rotch, of The Milford (New Hampshire) Journal, did his "think piece" after two gentlemen of the area were judged guilty of a capital crime.

"The real reason for capital punishment, people keep telling us, is to discourage crime by putting fear into the hearts of persons who might be tempted to commit murder. Only a few liberals dispute this theory.

"We will have a rare opportunity when New Hampshire hangs Russell Nelson and Frederick Marineau. Certainly the affair should be as public as possible so that the lesson will reach the people who need it most. The idea of erecting a gallows on the State House plaza has merit although the (town's) athletic field would be better equipped to handle the crowd.

"Admission might be charged to defray the cost of the trials but it (admission price) should not be so high as to discourage attendance.

"We would hope that schools would be dismissed, so that students whose characters are still in the formative stage would learn that one who takes a human life must expect to pay the supreme penalty.

"For the State to carry out the hanging behind the closed doors of the prison would do much to defeat the purpose of the punishment, and nobody knows how long it will be before New Hampshire has another chance for such a demonstration.

"Even those who find the idea of witnessing an execution distasteful must agree that if the purpose of capital punishment is to teach a lesson, the lesson will be most effective if the hanging is viewed by as many persons as possible."

More Skinny on the CIA

In another study regarding the make-up of the CIA, the U.S. Press Association this week added some more light to the dingy corners of this super-secret organization.

Recently, in these columns, we showed how the Central Intelligence Agency had become infiltrated with communists and perverts. In this, the second part, it is shown how the draft-dodgers, social climbers, and bureaucrats found a happy hiding ground for easy money, prestige and subversion.

The fact that the CIA is the subject of so much press coverage these days indicates that the agency suffers from the same malady that afflicted its predecessor, the OSS. President Roosevelt chose General "Wild Bill" Donovan, a World War I hero, to head the wartime OSS. The General was a fiercely American soldier, a doer. He recruited some terrific operational types and, with Donovan setting an example, these operational teams performed brilliantly in many countries.

But operational types aren't administrators, and back in headquarters, the inevitable bureaucrats, social climbers and jackals smelling easy, unvouched money, slipped in. Keeping them company was a very elite set of draft-dodgers who found the super-secret agency a marvelous haven. Some Communists slipped in, too. One of these was the headquarters starlet, Jane Foster, who back-stopped, or back-stabbed, field operations from Washington, notwithstanding a history of Communist Party work of many years. It was not, however, until 12 years after the war, July 1957, that a Federal Grand Jury made public an indictment against Jane Foster Zlatovski and her husband, George. That indictment contained five counts and 38 overt acts, some dating back to January, 1940, in behalf of a foreign power.

At the end of World War II, there was so much whispering about money scandals in the OSS that a Congressional investigation seemed in the making. General Donovan insisted that it was necessary to protect the integrity of operational techniques which would be revealed by any full-scale investigation. And, he pointed out, the OSS was being liquidated. Both the stinkers and the good guys were being mustered out. Why not let the skeletons be buried in the shade of th accomplishments of the OSS?

But the Roosevelt-Hopkins-Marshall dream of friendship with the USSR faded quickly in the late 40's. The blockade of Berlin prompted the Congress to reactivate an OSS-type organization.

In 1949, after the OSS-veteran Frank Wisner had been appointed head of the newly-formed operational arm of the CIA, Bill Donovan was asked if he had recommended Wisner for the job.

"Absolutely not," he replied. "Nor would I have done so. I did not know he was even being considered. It's my understanding that he was hand-picked by General Marshall, with the concurrence of Dean Acheson. He was the State Department's man."

The daily revelations of CIA projects and programs initiated during the Wisner "regime," make it clear that he was, indeed, very much the State Department's man. Operationally, the CIA was, for at least its first ten years, an underground errand-boy for the Department of State.

Centaur Marked by Local Scribe

General Dynamics/Convair last week opened to public view the final testing of its Atlas-Centaur-Surveyor spacecraft. The Surveyor will soft-land on the moon in September. The Atlas-Centaur combination will carry the Surveyor to its destination.

The exhibition is not a mock-up. It is the real McCoy. The hardware on display is the stuff that is now on its way to Cape Kennedy for the dramatic trip.

At the GD/Convair Kearny Mesa plant, the Atlas-Centaur-Surveyor was housed in the NASA Combined Systems Test Stand (CSCS.) The Atlas Standard Launch Vehicle 3C (SLV-3C), with a record of 81 successes of 84 launches already in the log-book, was prone. Its 57½ foot silvery length was undergoing static tests in combination with the Centaur/Surveyor sections.

The Atlas, Gerry Christ, acting chief of operations said, had been enlongated 51 inches to provide 6,000 additional

POINTING THE WAY—Mrs. Jack E. Meltzer, member of the Board of Directors of the Boys' and Girls' Aid Society gives directions to two Lemon Grove-Spring Valley area members of the organization. Improved Bus Service Seen As City Takes Over System

Better bus transportation is seen for the Lemon Grove-Spring Valley areas following the taking over of the bus system last week by the City of San Diego's non-profit corporation.

Clinton McKinnon, president of the San Diego Transit Corporation said his organization would meet with representatives of each of the communities in the near future to try to assess the transportation needs here.

"We intend to put into operation as soon as possible an increased service, reduced fare policy," McKinnon said. One hundred new buses will be purchased and other improvements for the comfort and convience of riders and for the efficiency of the system, will be made, he said.

Regarding improved service, McKinnon said that the transit agency has plans to devise a more comfortable ride, more ferquent schedules and faster service to outlying areas as well as downtown.

"We will be working with the personnel departments of the various industrial plants," McKinnon said, "in gearing service to their needs. Also we will work with the downtown merchants association, outlying communities and associations to provide service where required and indicated by the public's needs."

McKinnon indicated that the transit agency hoped to have a program of innovations including week-end passes, reduction in fares for students and accomodations for senior citizens.

"We hope to merchandise this system to provide the service people are entitled to enjoy as outlined in the election campaign last year," McKinnon said.

The transit agency is requesting release from the State Public Utilities Commission's jurisdiction, to allow San Diego's operation more flexibility to match the needs of the community.

Transit headquarters will be maintained temporarily in the Land Title Building, long occupied by the privately owned San Diego transit system. The architectural firm of Frank L. Hope and Associates has been retained for planning and adaption of the present bus system's plant at 15th and L st. Plans call for enlarging the facilities to include both operations and offices.

School Assistance Surplus Could ReduceComingTaxes

SACRAMENTO — Another $40 million surplus exists in the state school assistance apportionment fund and it appears probable the surplus in next year's funds will be even greater, the California Taxpayers' Association said.

The surplus occurs because factors determining the amount of assistance changed. Assessed valuations rise, qualifying districts for less support per pupil. The enrollment drops in some instances, again reducing the state reimbursement. There are not as many districts unifying and the bonuses are not as great as anticipated. Thus there are surpluses.

In the past two years, this is the third surplus and this surplus in the state's general fund will be available for other purposes.

Brown said the surplus should be even greater in the next fiscal year, which starts July 1st because unifications are not occurring as hoped for and because assessors throughout the state are equalizing assessment procedures so few er districts will qualify for excess apportionments author ized for districts without an adequate tax base to support schools.

Cal-Tax estimates the sur plus next year may be as grea as $60 million and the $40 mil lion already known to exis in the fiscal year which end Friday, another $80 to $10 million can be trimmed from the anticipated tax needs o the state.

Area Water Rates Stable Despite Increase In Cost

Despite the rise in the wholesale cost of domestic water for all of Southern California, the Helix Irrigation District in La Mesa, which supplies all the water for the Lemon Grove-Spring Valley area, does not plan to raise its rates.

Byron Miller, general manager of the Helix District, made the announcement, saying that the district would absorb the higher cost and an increase in rates would not be necessary for several years depending on construction, expansion, and other needs.

Most of the other 21 agencies that buy water from the Colorado River and sell it to their customers are expected the take the rise in the water rates for the time being.

Southern California has witnessed a rise over the past 20 years in the wholesale cost o water is and expecting a continual rise for the next few years.

The Helix district is a member of the Metropolitan Water District in Los Angeles, with Harry Griffin of Helix, on of San Diego County's three representatives.

The MWD arrives at the cost of the water through the cost of transportation. It then sells the water to the San Diego County Authority, with the water districts along the aqueduct system taking the water and distributing it to their customers.

Helix, along with San Diego, has adequate storage facilities for rain runoff, but most of the water for the remainder of the county comes directly from the Colorado.

The multi-million dollar state water project which would bring water from northern to southern California is said to have no affect on the water rates according to Miller. The Helix district raised its rates 15 per cent last year.

Mount Miguel High Receives Four Metal Classrooms

Spring Valley's Mount Miguel High School will receive some aid to relieve the overcrowding student population with the addition of portable classrooms on the campus.

The Grossmont School Board of Education awarded the Design Facilities Corporation of El Monte with a $69,600 contract for the leasing of the metal classrooms for Mt. Miguel and also Granite Hills High in El Cajon.

The four new classrooms on each school will be used for study halls and nonlaboratory classes. The buildings were leased for three years, but may be returned to the owners if a school bond issue is passed next fall.

N.A.M. Prexy Due Here For 'Guiding Hands' Opening

Public open house will be held Sunday at the Home of Guiding Hands' newly completed facility for retarded children at 10025 Los Ranchitos rd., Lakeside.

Joseph H. Famme, board chairman, will preside over the opening ceremonies, starting at 3 p.m. The U.S. Naval Training Center Band, will present a concert prior to the ceremonies at 2.15 p.m.

The invocation will be delivered by the Rev. Mark Doran, Exec. Dir. of Catholic Services, Diocese of San Diego. Ray Wilson, publisher of the Culver City Evening Star. News and president of the Home of Guiding Hands will relate a brief history of the Home and introduce the main speaker, W. P. Gullander.

The dedication prayer will be said by the Rev. Arne Christianson of College Lutheran Church.

Main speaker at the ceremonies will be W. P. Gullander, president, National Association of Manufacturers who is now serving his fifth year as chief executive officer of America's largest business association.

Gullander is responsible for the 71-year old N.A.M.'s revitalization program which has gained new respect among business circles.

One of the most widely traveled executives in the United States, Gullander maintains a wide range of activities, some related to the Association's programs and interests and others growing out of a personal conviction that businessmen should provide active direction and value-judgements to the work of public service organizations.

Gullander is expected to address his remarks to the subject of private enterprise providing service and facilities essential to community health and welfare. He will cite the Home of Guiding Hands Lakeside facility as an example of individual initiative which brought together a cross-section of the groups and individuals from the San Diego community and nearby areas who were deeply concerned about the problem of the retarded child.

Except for some few finishing touches and landscaping, the Home of Guiding Hands is now a reality, having completed the first half of the Lakevide 24-hour care for 192 reside facility which will protarded children. Eventually, the Home will have a 400 capacity.

W. P. Gullander

Occupying seven of its 14 acre site, the Home of Guiding Hands contains eight family units, a central kitchen with canteen, barber shop and beauty shop, a training center and school, medical and dental dispensary, administration building and maintenance facilities.

A swimming pool, essential to proper training of the mentally retarded, has been donated by San Diego's swimming pool contractors. The Home was designed by Robert Des Lauriers, AIA and John Sigurdson, AIA and cost $2,176,793. Of this amount, $250,000 was donated in cash and pledges, grants from state and federal governments totaled $1,251, 338.

San Diego financial institutions provided $700,000 in mortgage funds. The Home needs a minimum of $200,000 from this year's campaign goal of $325,000 to help reduce its mortgage payments, which, in turn, affects the amount required for cost of maintenance and the families of the Home's retarded children.

Paper Wins Two Awards

A Freedom of the Press award was made last week to Max Goodwin, publisher of the Spring Valley Bulletin and the Lemon Grove Review.

The special award was made by judges of the San Diego Chapter of Sigma Delta Chi's annual Press Awards Banquet Friday night at Torrey Pines Inn.

The special award was made for Goodwin's appearance last year before the San Diego County Civil Service Commission to deter the commission's move toward secrecy. The Commission reversed its earlier decision to hold back pertinent information regarding commission charges against civil service employees.

Goodwin also received the SDX third place award for editorials.

Specifically, the award was made for "Bigness Does Not Make Happiness", an editorial in which this newspaper protested against the philosophy of forming bigger high school districts.

Grossmont Trustees Slash $100,000 From College Tab

Grossmont College Trustees put into motion their first attempt to cut down the expected soaring budget by slashing $100,000 from the proposed $3.5 million budget allotted for operation in the 1967-68 school year.

In another move to lower the tax burden, the Trustees tentatively knocked off almost half of a recommended salary increase for the faculty and employees. The original figure of five per cent was trimmed to a 2.7 per cent hike.

The cost-of-living was cited by the college faculty-administration salary committee as the reason for their seeking the five per cent raise. Board chairman Rexford Hall opposed the raise, indicating that the Grossmont Union High School District Teachers Association had received just a 2.7 cost-of-living hike and that there was no difference in the living expenses of the two groups.

Despite the cut of the proposed budget by the Trustees the tax rate of the college this year is expected to rise from the present 38.1 cent rate on each $100 of assessed valuation to 63.8 cents.

Due to the expanding enrollment and college facilities, college president Harold Hughes estimated that the budget for the coming year would exceed the previous year by $452,877. The higher tax rate approved by the voters last April has accounted for the increase in the colleges operations budget.

Trustees also indicated that there were other areas in which cuts in the budget would be desirable. One of those is the objection to the hiring of a business manager and assistant for the college. A $15,000 tab had been placed on this position and trustee Robert Dryden opposed the salary along with the opening of the job itself.

Board chairman Hall also objected to an expansion of the college newspaper, The G, which would provide $2,800 for an extra page for notices of the community.

ANOTHER AWARD FOR NETZLEY — Lemon Grove School District trustees made a suprise award of appreciation to Superintendent Byron L. Netzley, at the conclusion of the last school board meeting.
Netzley was presented with a certificate, which read, in parts, "—professional and personal qualifications are contributions have been responsible for attaining recognition of excellence for the total educational program; and for maintaining harmonious relations between the school staff and community."
The award was made in recognition of 25 years of service to the district as superintendent. In the photo above, Board President Bert Cosby congratulates Netzley following the presentation.

California Assemblyman Blasts NAACP Legal Move

"If the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People's Legal Defense Fund succeeds in its attempt to block the execution of every murderer on death row, Californians can brace themselves for an increase in crimes of violence which are already the highest in history", said Assemblyman Charles J. Conrad, 57th District.

"When the N.A.A.C.P. talks about 'cruel and unusual punishment', I wish they would give some consideration to the torture often inflicted upon the victims and to the years of lonliness and economic loss faced by the families of those victims.

"The death penalty is a deterrent. Numerous criminals have testified how they hesitated to kill because, 'I didn't want to sniff that gas'.

"But, for over a generation, we have seen the growth of a philosophy that it is wrong to punish murderers and rapists. The criminals are just 'sick people' and during that time crime has reached an all time high.

"In addition, this suit by the N.A.A.C.P. threatens our concept of constitutional government. Under the American form of government laws are made by the legislatures not by the courts.

"It is for the Legislature to determine whether we will have capital punishment and the California Legislature under both Republican and Democratic administrations has consistently voted to retain the death penalty."

The Model Prayer

Our Lord gave us definite instructions on the subject of prayer. We call it the "Lord's Prayer." I will therefore that men pray everywhere"; "the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." The church built the whole practice of the Christian life around regular prayer. Hardison's Telespanish Conjunctions in Spanish are used much like conjunctions in English. They link together words, phrases and clauses For example, the Spanish conjunction "y" (and) can be used to link the two words "casa" (house) and "coche" (car) together in a phrase Thus the expression "Es su casa y coche." (It is your house and car uses the conjunction "y" (and) to join the words and "casa" and "coche" together.

Some other conjunctions are "o" can be used to link the words "usted" and "yo" in a phrase. Consider the phrase "Usted o yo." (You or I). The Spanish conjunction "o" links the words "usted" and "yo" in a phrase togther. Also, the expression "El ni ella." (He or she.) uses the word "ni" to link "el" and "ella" together in a phrase.

In using the conjunction "si" (if in the phrase "Yo voy si tu vas." (I will go if you go.) the words "yo voy" and "tu vas" are linked together with the conjunction "si."

The conjunction "si" (if) is sometimes confused with "si" (yes). Both words sound alike. The big difference between the words may be noted in the written form. An accent mark appears over the "i" in "si" when it means "yes." When there is no accent mark over the "i" in "si" it means "if."

Conjunctions are used in the practice phrases below. Read them over and then dial 276-2762 on your telephone where you are invited to practice saying the same words with the Spanish speaking record.

In announcing his candidacy, Curran said, "The first four years as mayor of San Diego have given me the opportunity to institute many new programs and to awaken the spirit of the 'Can-Do' city. A great deal has been started and much has been accomplished. There is still a lot of work to be done and I believe that there is a great deal more that I can yet do for the city."

Among the projects that Curran has initiated as Mayor of San Diego, and which he said that he would like to have the opportunity of seeing to a successful conclusion are the city's 200th anniversary in 1969, Tijuana Flood Control and the further development including flood control, of Mission Valley.

A statement of policy from your new San Diego Transit Corporation

Last year, San Diegans voted, overwhelmingly, to purchase the privately owned San Diego Transit System. Saturday, despite obstacles and delays, the people of San Diego officially acquired the system. The basic goals: to reduces fares and improve services to fulfill the needs of our growing metropolitan area. Here is a step-by-step plan from your Corporation's Board of Directors aimed at achieveing these goals:

100 New air conditioned buses will be ordered, with delivery beginning in September.

Comprehensive origin and destination studies will be undertaken immediately in order to determine where—and how—service is to be improved. While such studies take time to complete, they are an absolute necessity in making orderly and efficient improvements.

Innovations in service, such as special weekend passes, reduction of student fares and accommodations for senior citizens will be announced as soon as practical.

Meetings with the city governments of Chula Vista, Coronado, El Cajon, Imperial Beach and La Mesa will be held as soon as possible. We will also work closely with industrial plants, military groups employing civilian workers, the downtown associations, outlying communities and associations and other interested groups in order to coordinate the needed service in these critical areas.

Co-operation with the San Diego City Council, City Manager's Office and the City Attorney's staff, will be continued, recognizing the importance of their full support during the past year.

Recognition of transit system employees' important contributions to this public service will be made by a close alliance with representatives of organized labor, the employees and their families.

Our confidence is placed in the experience, professional talents and expertise of Mr. Thomas Prior who has been appointed to manage the transit system.

We are determined to provide YOU with the kind of service the public has the right to expect.

It is now your transit system. We not only urge you to ride the buses—we welcome your comments and suggestions for improved service and efficiency.

Laugh Hit Opens At Circle Arts

A laugh studded comedy about a sparring match between the older and the younger generations' plight, called "Generation," brought Don DeFore and Leon Ames back on the stages together for the first time since the mid-forties, when they opened July 4th at Circle Arts Theatre.

"Generation" was one of New York's biggest comedy hits in the 1966 season. It later had a national tour in the larger cities but this is the first release to a stock theatre and therefore will be the premiere in San Diego.

In "Generation" Don DeFore will be seen as the doting father from Chicago, who hastened to New York to visit his just married daughter and to meet the man she has picked as a husband. Leon Ames is cast as Dr. Stan Herman, a sort of Milton Berle of the medical profession and an old friend of DeFore's.

The play's humor arises from the hard sledding of the older generation to meet and understand the young generation and their way of life.

pounds of boost. The whole vehicle is 117 feet high.

All was going well in the testing.

The Surveyor, in the "clean room", where workmen wore masks, gloves and gowns, was being placed in its nose-cone shroud, its spidery legs and antenna folded around itself like a do-it-yourself beach chair before it is assembled.

The Centaur, the second stage, cloaked in brilliant white fibreglass, stood on its base and reached six levels into the air.

At the fifth floor level engineers were struggling with the cause of a burnt-out fuse. Newsmen gathered around the engineers anticipating a break-down of the project.

Not this reporter!

We stayed on the lee side of the Centaur which is about as big around as a small house. While the other guys were looking over the shoulders of the engineers, we quietly wrote the name of our teen-age daughter on the fibreglas coating of the Centaur with our copy pencil!

We can visualize the September count-down. T plus eight; T plus . . . who the heck is Lisa Goodwin?"

What better legacy could a parent give his child than this contact with all the generations to come by having her name blasted into eternal orbit?

Californians Save On Taxable Goods

Average Californians spent less for taxable goods and apparently saved more during the first three months of the year, cutting the sales gain from a year ago to two percent — the smallest first quarter increase since 1961.

This was the conclusion today of Richard V. Nevins, Southern California member of the State Board of Equalization, who released the taxable sales total of $7.8 billion for the quarter, up $158 billion from a year ago.

"The figures indicate that Californians apparently spent more in supermarkets and department stores, and less with dealers in cars and appliances," Nevins said.

County Agricultural Corps To Hunt Out Farm Pests

For the second year, personnel from the San Diego County Department of Agriculture are participating in a residential grid survey. This planned survey uses a scientific approach in attempting to detect new pests of agriculture. The well-trained personnel research for unusual insects, plant diseases, weeds, nematodes, and other pests.

James M. Moon, San Diego County Agricultral Commissioner, states, "We are extremely pleased with the results of this survey as a means of detecting plant pests which may detrimental to agriculture." Last October, for example, a San Diego residence was found to have gardenias infested with the citrus whitefly. This pest is a threat to the citrus industry of the State, and efforts to eradicate it began without delay.

The residential survey is planned so that one block will be surveyed in each half-mile square of the approximately 300 square miles of residential area in the County. In each of these blocks, four properties will be inspected. The County's residential areas will be surveyed this way annually, but a different block will be inspected each year.

Mr. Moon said, "Plant pests can enter the County in many ways, and it is believed that residential properties are one of the most likely places to find these 'hitchhiking bugs.'" Many of the most serious plant pests have been found in non-agricultural areas, and eradication can be attempted before they can become established in commercial plantings. Several of these pests are also harmful to ornamental plantings.

Department presonnel working on this survey will give the homeowner contacted a written explanation of the program, and will request permission to inspect the property. Two persons will form a survey team, and they will identify themselves as representatives of the San Diego County Department of Agriculture.

"We ask the cooperation of each resident contacted," Moon added, "as the survey will not only benefit the County's multi-million dollar agricultural industry, but it will also help the homeowner who is faced with a continual battle with plant pests which are already well established in the garden."

Spring Valley Youth Does Well At Auction

DEL MAR — David Vertin, an enterprising young man from Spring Valley, had a profitable day at the San Diego County Fair's annual Junior Auction when he sold two of the 70 head of sheep he raises as a Spring Valley 4-H Club project.

Vertin, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. I. M. Vertin of P. O. Box 296, Spring Valley, sold his Grand Champion Hamsphire lamb, "Frothie," for $4.50 a pound to Unimart, a total purchase of $517.50.

He then climbed in the auction ring to sell his Reserve Grand Champion, "Snuffy," to Bridgford Meat Co. for $1.10 a pound.

Average price paid for the total of 152 sheep sold was 48¾ cents per pound, and the next highest price to Vertin's two sales was $1.00 per pound.

Vertin's Grand Champion was donated to the fair's Scholarship Fund by Unimart. It was thus resold to Coca Cola for 42½ cents a pound.

Vertin has won more awards than he can remember for his prize-winning sheep. A sophomore at Fresno State College next fall, he plans to study veterinary medicine.

San Diego Site Fixed For Peace Corps Test

San Diego area residents interested in helping the people of developing nations to help themselves are invited to take the Peace Corps Placemnt Test at 1.30 p.m. on Saturday, July 15 at Room 219, Post Office Building, 815 E st.

The test measures general aptitude and the ability to learn a foreign language, not education or achievement. It is given to determine where and how an applicant will be happiest and best utilized overseas. The test requires no preparation and is non-competitive; an applicant can neither pass nor fail. The test takes about one hour and a half.

The application form, available from local post offices or from the Peace Corps in Washington, D.C. 20525, is the most important factor in the selection of Volunteers. Persons interested in serving in the Peace Corps must fill out an application, if they have not already done so, and present it to the tester before taking the test.

Over 15,000 Peace Corps Volunteers are now at work in 53 developing nations. They come from every conceivable background, but are united in their efforts to improve the food production, health, education and life of the millions whose governments have asked the Peace Corps to help.

Vehicle Director Warns Motorists

Fourth of July motorists — have you checked the date on your drivers license lately? Department of Motor Vehicles Director Verne Orr pointed out that not only is July 4th the nation's birthday, it also the birthday of many otherwise conscientious California drivers who will probably miss their license renewal deadlines.

"Approximately 800,000 California motorists, he said, "hold licenses which will be expiring during the next six months. and of these about 100,000 will neglect to renew on time. License always expire on the driver's birthday at three or four year intervals.

"If you renew late," he added, "you will have to pass not only a written test but a behind-the-wheel test as well. You also risk getting a ticket for driving without a valid license."

Orr stressed that the law permits renewal of a drivers license any time during the six months before it expires.

He urged motorists to take advantage of this provision by renewing their driving privileges before the birthday expiration date stamped on their licnses.

La Presa Water District Reflects Southern Calif. Land Speculation History

Ralph W. Chapman, president of the La Presa County Water District, recently released information about the District, which should not only help the newcomers to the area, but act as a refresher to the older residents. Under the title, "Know Your Water District," it read.

The La Presa County Water District is composed of an area of approximately 3,700 acres, yet within its boundaries the entire history of land promotion in Southern California is represented. So, too, are the many problems of each era of development.

Water and sewer development came to the La Presa area in the late 1950's, resulting in the physical development of today. Perhaps a memory ride back into the past will add to understanding and appreciation of the diverse problems encountered in the organization of the La Presa County Water District.

The construction of Sweetwater Dam in the 1880's was an engineering miracle of its day. When completed, it stood 90 feet high and was said to be the highest dam in the world. The present dam was created by adding another 20 feet on top of the original dam and the encasement of the masonry dam in a modern concrete jacket. All the cement used in building the original dam came from Belgium by ship in large wooden barrels. The Stone used was quarried from the site below the dam visible from the South Bay Freeway.

Construction of the dam necessitated the building of a branch line from the National City and Otay Railroad to bring in materials. With the existance of the railroad which terminated at the old La Presa depot at the foot of Grand Avenue, it naturally followed that an enterprising group should promote a hotel for the tourist trade. In natural sequence a subdivision was laid out. This is now commonly known as the La Presa Colony and was recorded November 23, 1887 under the name of La Presa Heights. Time passed—the hotel and depot burned down, the dam being completed, no further profitable use existed for the railroad and the spur was removed. All that remained was the legal entity of the subdivision and La Presa lay fallow in the sun.

In the year 1911, land speculators again chose the La Presa area in which to operate. This time an enterprising publisher of a set of encyclopedias subdivided the romantically named East San Diego Villa Heights subdivision. Today this is more commonly known as Dictionary Hill. The sales promotion completed, the age of status of quiet returned to La Presa, leaving again a subdivision entity of record.

Once again during the 1920's a wave of land speculation hi La Presa, and on August 10 1927, the Eastside Addition o La Presa was subdivided and recorded. A mutual water company was formed but was unable to develope a dependable source of water. The during the depression and subsequent war years, the are continued its slumbers.

The post war building boor f the 1950's was a differen ory. A more sophisticate nd and housing concept hav g evolved, the area, genera identified as Spring Valle States, was developed. In rovements needed to distr ute water and carry off sew ge were incorporated into th onstruction costs and finan g. Also, the availability o olorado River water mad levelopment of the La Pres ounty Water District, no nly feasible, but a practic cality.

Dear Editor:

Can there be any act more sickening and revolting than a crowd of so-called citizens desecrating and burning their country's flag? Those who resort to such moronic behavior are surely lost in the depths of depravity. Obviously, their first loyalty is not the United States.

True, our Nation is founded on concepts and principles which encourage dissent and opposition. These are traditions we must always defend and support. But touching a torch to the flag far exceeds reasonable protest. It is a shameful act which serves no purpose but to encourage those who want our country to erupt in violence and destruction.

On this 191st anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, we might ask what causes unpatriotic outbursts and irrational protests. Why do people turn against their native land and openly support totalitarian forces whose goal is to enslave the world — forces which do not even allow token opposition from their subjects? Why do some individuals refuse to serve and defend their country? Why do they burn their draft cards and their flag?

There may be many reasons for such action, but I am fully convinced that dying patriotism is one major cause. Love of country is being de-emphasized and excluded from several phases of our life. Many educators and other leaders seem to feel it is no longer necessary for boys and girls to be concerned with how our country came into being, what it stands for, and the courageous and noble deeds of our forefathers to preserve it.

Conditions are now such in some circles that an individual who professes love of his country, reverence for its flag, and belief in the principles which make our Nation great is considered a yokel. Open aversion to patriotism of any form is increasing. Even some news media take a "tongue-in-cheek" approach to persons and groups which promote and participate in patriotic endeavors. Love of one's country is treated as some kind of social disease to be tolerated, if not stamped out. Protests are made that too much patriotism leads to international conflict. I submit that the United States will never have anything to fear from its ardent and genuinely patriotic citizens.

American history proves that freedom and liberty come at high prices and that their upkeep is costly and time-consuming. As Daniel Webster so aptly put it, "God grants liberty only to those who love it and are always ready to guard and defent it. Let our object be our country . . . " — not our country the object of desecration and abuse.

John Edgar Hoover,
Director
Federal Bureau of Investigation

To the Editor:

As I leave the office of Grand Regent of Court Teresa of Avila No. 1580 Catholic Daughters of America I wish to thank the Lemon Grove Review for the fine publicity we have received over the past two years.

If at anytime we are needed to help in any civic project, I am sure our incoming Grand Regent, Mrs. Albert Bolshazy will be more than willing to cooperate.

It is with deep regret that I must say we are leaving Lemon Grove, but we hope to return in a couple of years. I love the town, and its residents the way they all help one another in time of distress, regardless of color, race or creed. Once again I say thank you and may God Bless all of you always.

Dear Editor:

Recently your column "Politics is big business", was brought to my attention.

After Romney talked on TV and showed how very little he knew about foreign affairs the war, etc, etc, some of his most ardent admirers changed their mind about him as a possible presidential candidate.

At present, polls show Nixon running ahead of Romney in popularity. This could change of course.

But would you mind telling me just what SPECIFIC things you have against Nixon?

If Dr. Parkinson wants to sell his vote getting ability to the highest bidder, is that anything against him? He has proven talent to sell, just as a volumnist sells his output. And it might well be that he among others, changed his his mind about Romney as time went on.

I don't know your paper, nor your political learnings, but I DEDUCE from your writing that you are a New Leal, Fair Deal, Great Society Democrat. You have a right to your opinions but I would like to know just what definite horrible things Nixon has done to incur such displeasure. Enclosed find stamped envelope and would so appreciate your reply.

Yours for fair play,
(Mrs.) Agnes M. Butler
Williams, Arizona
